

TOTAL HIP REPLACEMENT

The hip is one the body's largest weight-bearing joints. It consists of two main parts: a ball (femoral head) at the top of your thighbone (femur) that fits into a rounded socket (acetabulum) in your pelvis. Hip replacement surgery involves removing the ball and socket joint. The top part of the thighbone (femur) is removed, and an implant with a stem fits within the central canal of the femur. Then any remaining cartilage and some bone are removed from the socket part of the joint (within the pelvis), and a new socket is put in its place. These replace the ball and socket, and allow movement at the new joint.
